THE LOGICAL CONCLUSION

one must come to when a store is ever busy is that merit and value predominate. The Hirschman way has always been to put forth our best and most incessant effort to give superior value and store service, and the crowds that daily throng our store are conclusive evidence in our favor that one and all get a SOUARE DEAL.

HERE'S A WHITE CANVAS POINTER

Headquarters for White Canvas Oxfords for Women

Last year it was impossible to get white canvas Oxfords in quantities for women at any price, as the demand was ahead of the supply. This year promises to be a bigger white season than ever. We are here with the goods. We anticipated this demand and contracted with America's foremost white producers for 3000 pairs. Buying in large lots, we bought at lowest prices, and determined to capture the white canvas trade of Salt Lake, has led us to cut prices. We wish to mention that our white Oxfords, as well as colors, are made by workmen who have a special department, and every pair pure white (not soiled). We also have a preparation to keep white Oxfords clean. Prices like this:

House So Decides by Vote of 110 to 36; Interesting Debate.

WASHINGTON, June 15,-The House today, by a vote of 110 to 35, voted in favor of a lock canal across the Isthmus of Panama, the amendment to this effect tauer of New York

With members of Congress sitting on the short steps in the aisies of the House, around the space in groups, the galleries filled, and with Mr. Burton of Ohio, pointer in hand, discussing charts showing the difference between sea-level and lock canal, the House presented every appearance of a class room.

Mr. Burton took position in front of the maps and called attention to the vital difference between the two types, remarking that were the topography understood difference between the two types, remarking that were the topography understood it would be the very strongest argument for the lock-level canal. He said if the banks would not cave, if large boats could go through without running against rocks at the side and could be properly steered, then a sca-level canal would be the enterprise which would be naturally preferred "But such a canal, convenient for modern shipping and prospective shipping, would in the judgment of those who have carefully studied the subject exnaust twenty years or more in building."

Mr. Bartlett of Georgia made a point against the amendment of Mr. Littauer, He insisted that the amendment was clearly new jegislation and argued the question from that premise.

The chair, Mr. Watson of Indiana, held the amendment in order, and without further discussion the Littauer amendment was adopted.

AMUSEMENTS

Henrietta Crosman's greatest recent years have been scored in "costume" plays. Now she is presenting a modern comedy and those who are familiar with her delightful stage attainments can readily understand the degree of charm she will impart to the character of an up-to-date young woman in "Mary Mary Quite Contrary." The comedy is merry, bright and entertaining. Henrietta Crosman's greatest successes

Old Heldelberg' will be presented for the last time this afternoon and evening at the Orpheum, where the clever stock company is roaking such a hit in Mansfield's great play. It is on the cards that it will be many moons before Salt Lake will have a chance of witnessing this play again, as it calls for a hig royalty, beyond the reach of an average stock company, and no traveling companies are presenting it this or next season in the West. Shemandoah, the bill for next week, gives promise of being the hit of the season, with Mr. Mayall, Miss Stuart and the other favorities in the cast, which has been enlarged by six for this play.

No company ever got so popular in a few

No company ever got so popular in a few weeks as has Zinn's big Travesty company at the Casino park. These hot nights the park is crowded to capacity with lovers of good music and comedy and this company certainly pleases the audience from start to finish of the show. Starting tonight. The Grand Duchess' will be the bill for one week, and this charming opera will be made more pleasant by the introduction of several more of Zinn's song hits including "Zasa." Sally Ann." Little Girl. You'll Do." Take Me Back." and many others sung and danced with that snap and go that is characteriztic of all of Zinn's interpolations.

Commencing this afternoon the Lyric offers the strongest production ever seen here at popular prices. In the Bittner Stock company's production of "Northern Lights." Forty people will be used in order to give the play a complete presentation, and the speaking parts are in exceptionally strong hands. Miss Jane Kelton, a strong favorite here, has the leading female role. A banner week's business is looked for.

BIDS FOR PAVING ARE ALL REJECTED

City Engineer Instructed to Readvertise for Bids Thereon.

P. J. Moran and the Barber Asphalt Company Compete; the Former Lowest.

all bids for street paving which submitted at the meeting Friday night, and the City Engineer was instructed to readvertise for bids, the advertisements to be placed in several Eastern engineering journals and the bids to be opened

The members of the board all expressed themselves as regretting very much that this action was necessary, but in view that the lowest bid submitted for the work on Main, First and Fourth South streets was $11,459.40 higher than the low bid submitted under the former call, that they did not feel justified in awarding the contract and thereby increase the the taxpayer something over 50 cents

While the low bid on the East Second South paving was somewhat lower than the estimate prepared by the City Englineer, the bid was figured on the same basis as the others had been, and therefore the board took the same action in regard to this bid

But Two Bids Submitted

But two contractors submitted blds, the Barber Asphalt company and P. J. Moran, being the same bidders who submitted blds under the formor advertisement, the conditions being reversed this time, however, Moran being the low bidder and the Barber company the high. Another aspect of the transaction is that Moran's present bid is considerably bigher than the Barber company's former bid and the latter's present bid is a great deal higher than Moran's present bid.

Mr. Rooklidge of the board stated that the representative of the Barber company had informed him that the reason that the Barber company had made such an increase in their bids was that the price of aspiral had raised considerably since the former bids were submitted. The board was at a less to understand that statement, inasmuch as Moran had not been affected in the same way, his bid being lower than it was at first. The following is a statement of the former and present bids submitted by both concerns:

DOG COMMITS SUICIDE

Becomes Tired of Life Through Jealousy of Her Rival.

ousy of Her Rival.

NEW YORK, June 15.—There seems to be no doubt about it Beauty, prize-winning fox terrier, imbued with aimost human intelligence, never could have leaped to her death by a blunder of height calculation. She simply committed suicide by throwing herself from the fourthstory window of the apartment of James Gilligan, $32 West Forty-seventh street. She landed head first and died instantly. The act was witnessed by half a dozen persons, and the agreement was unanimous that the dog had jumped purposely, and her master subsequently bore out the suicide theory.

Gilligan has another female fox terrier called Dalsy, of which Beauty was clearly and unmistakably jealous.

Any attention bestowed upon Dalsy caused the most violent exhibition of temper by Beauty. About 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon Beauty Jumped on Gilligan's bed and was ordered off. Daley was allowed to remain, and Gilligan talked to Dalsy. Beauty resented this, and again jumped up on the bed and frisked about. Again she was ordered down. A third time Beauty jumped on the bed and Gilligan shoved her off.

Beauty whined and ran through the flat to the front room, jumped on a window sill, and poised for a moment, looked back and walled.

Then she jumped into the street.

DRAMATIC SCENES IN LE DOUX MURDER CASE

Witnesses Tell of Statements Made by Defendant After the Tragedy.

STOCKTON, Cal., June 15.-This was a sen sational day in the Le Doux murder trial Under a battery fire of overruled objections the prosecution is putting in testimony contradictory of the statements made by the used to the officers after her arrest. At that witnessed the death of McVicar and had put his body in the trunk. When the prosecution sought to show that there had been no such man as Joe Miller the defense objected on the ground that the prosecution had already proved by the alleged confession of the de-fendant that Joe Miller had committed the crime, and that any attempt to show to the contrary was an attempt on the part of he prosecution to contradict its own evidence. Judge Nutter overruled the objection.

Joseph Healey, with whom the defendan spent all of the day following the murder in spect all of the day following the murder in San Francisco, testified that she shad told him that McVicar had died of miners' consumption at his home in Sonora; that his brother was present and had given her the deceased's watch and chain, and that the body had been shipped to his home in Cripple Creek. Colo. She also, according to Hoaley, told him that there was a trunc and a suit case at the Southern Pacific pissenger station in Stockton, which she wanted him to take charge of saying that she could trust nobody clse as she could him.

Healey gave his testimony with dramatic effect, and it caused quite a sensation in court. Much of his testimony tended to show that Joe Miller was a myth.

A telegram from Mrs. Le Doux to Healey on the afternoon of the 24th, the day of the crime, in which she asked him to meet her at the Royal house in San Francisco upon the arrival of the afternoon train from Stockton, was shown.

RETURNED TO LIFE

Richard Howland Came Back to Earth to Tell of Heavenly Visions.

NEW YORK, June 15.—When the doctor left Richard Howland's home on Eighty-ninth street near Fifth avenue, Brooklyn last Tuesday morning he told Mrs. Howland that her hueband could not live half an hour. Howland had been gradually sinking after a long liness of a combination of diseases.

The doctor left the house at 10 o'clock Mrs. Howland and two of her nieces remained with the dying man in his room. His pulse grew waker, a pallor came over his face and at 11 o'clock his breathing seemed to stop entirely.

his face and at 11 o'clock his breathing seemed to stop entirely.

Mrs. Howland and the nicces waited for a long time for evidence of life, then, convinced of his death, they spread the news around the neighborhood.

Howland was well known in the Hamilton section—be had been a volunteer fireman of Fort Hamilton—and soon the house was thronged with old friends. They were permitted to go into his bedroom. All agreed that 'poor old Dick' was certainly dead.

Mrs. Howland about noon time, sont a boy in the neighborhood after Herbat & Cr. undertakers of Third avenue. The boy lost his way and it was not until 3 o'clock at night that he found the place. In the meantime the neighbors had removed Howland from his bed and placed him upon a couch in a darkened room. His wife remained at his side until the undertaker arrived, at 11 o'clock.

When the undertaker went into the more

When the undertaker went into the room where the supposed corpse was laid out he was amazed to see Howland suddenly sit belt upright. The undertaker hustled him back to bed and Howland, staring around the room asked, feebly:

"Where's Molly" meaning his wife.

Mrs. Howland, hearing his voice, rushed into the room, Howland told her he had had a strange dream about being dead.

"I thought you were going to bury me," he said faintly. "I'm not going to die until tomorrow, because I want all the boys at my funeral Sunday."

Then Howland talked of angels he had seen and in a few minutes dropped off into a stupor. The doctor was called and administered heart stimulants that kept Howland silve until Wednesday noon. When he stopped breathing the doctor was again sent for and declared there was no doubt now that he was dead.

Gussie Holland, one of the neighbors, said yesterday that Mr. Howland's body was cold when she saw him Tuesday afternoom. "He had every appearance of being dead," she declared. "and we did not think it necessary to call the doctor. I listened a long time for his breathing and felt his pulse, but there seemed to be no evidence of either."

Attempt to Fasten Button Costs Girl Broken Arm.

Broken Arm.

BELLEVILLE, Ill., June 15.—One little button clear out of latitude and longitude, in an inaccessible spot on the rear elevation of a shirt waist—a provoking pearl button that refused to budge the sixteenth of an inch north or south where pink fingers were grasping frantically after it—brought more grief to Miss Annie Weisenborn than all the peep holes in all the "peek-a-boo" waists have brought to all other girls in the State of Illinois.

Illinois.

Miss Weisenborn is carrying her left arm in a sling. The bones in it are broken. The shirt waist is in a bureau drawer and the button is still unbuttoned. Hereafter Miss Weisenborn will evince a haughty disdain for any decree of fashion which says the shirt waist opening must be in the back. It is a front ingress and egress henceforth or nothing.

opening must be in the back. It is a front ingress and egress henceforth or nothing.

Miss Weisenborn was alone when the button began to mishehave. She was due for a party at 8 o'clock. Her pretty brown hair was in order at half-past 7 o'clock sharp and she was happy as she glanced into the mirror. Then she donned the fateful waist and hummed bits of a love song as she buttoned up. One button was still unconquered when it lacked five minutes of 3 o'clock. Over one shoulder went a white arm. It was no use. Over the other shoulder want another arm. The finger tips just touched the edge of the button. She tried from the other angle, working from a low base of operation upward. She strained, twisted and grimaced. At 8 o'clock she made a mighty effort, there was a snap of bones, a shriek and then—the victim fainted. Miss Weisenborn did not go to the party. Instead a doctor was called.

"I am interested in and built the rail-way there and have an ice plant and electric light plant in course of erection. I also shall have a $1.00,000 lumber plant in operation soon after my return.

"Owing to adverse legislation American capital is not freely seeking outlet among us. Stagnation has largely followed this unwise policy, and the loss of our markets has made matters worse. Free sugar would help develop large tracts of land. American people need not fear our possible output of sugar, for if all we raise came here duty free it would not be more than 1½ per cent of the total imports if the duty were removed we could not double that amount in five years. We are handicapped by poor labor and a scarcity of men even at that.

"General Wood and the killing of women? Nonsense, General Wood came there with the prejudice of most people against him because of alleged favorilism of the President. He took the most difficult task possible, and in a year he was the most popular man in the islands. Americans flocked into his jurisdiction because they felt safe there. All elements of our diverse population would be delighted to see him advanced. As to his killing women in Jolo, the American people made the same complaint against 'Hell Roaring Jake Smith,' and as a result two years of warfare and hundreds of lives were lost. If they do not let Gen. Wood alone it will be the same in his case. I sincerely hope that Gen. Wood's work will be permitted to stand.

The disclosure furnishes a key to an episode which has been the subject of merry gossip for a fortnight. This gossip was started when a farmer came to town to discover the identity of two girls who drove an automobile that wrecked his wagon late at night on the Hill Brook road. He learned that the girls were Vassar students, and immediately ceased his investigation. his investigation.

It now develops that the girls were a senior and a sophomore in Vassar college, members of prominent Western families, and popular in smart society in Fough-keepste. The senior received some time ago a handsome automobile, said to have been a present from her flance. She kept it lin a sgarage in town and took her friends on frequent rides over the country A favorite stopping place was the Mill Brook inn. It is known now that the pretty young senior left the campus one evening recently in company with the sophomore, and the automobile was ordered from the garage. They enjoyed a fine moonlight spin, and rumer has it that a young man was a passenger.

All would have gone well had it not been for the narrowness of Hill Brookroad. The auto was traveling at a merry clip and crashed into the farmer's wagon. The fair autoists did not stop to investigate the accident. The following day Poughkeepsie papers had an account of the collision. After investigating and learning the identity of the Vassar girls, the farmer gallantly kept secret their identity and dropped the matter.

The senior's sister a freshman, was in the secret of the moonlight ride. When the senior and the sophomore appeared at midnight, the freshman was on watch to unlock the door of the dormitory and admit them.

Then followed a questioning of the girls and the administering of penalties. Their parents were notified and hastened to Poughkeepsie. Every effort was made to keep secret the names of the girls. An appeal was made to President Taylor, and he upheld the action taken by Mrs. Kendricks.

The senior will be permitted to take her degree at the coming commencement, but she will not be permitted to participate in the graduating exercises, dear to the heart of every Vassar girl.

The sophomore and the freshmen have been expelled and cannot return to Vassar. They have remained in the city, however.
